Supporting Education

TASSO commends the Australian Education Union Tasmania Branch on its Lifting Learning paper – an initiative presenting solutions to Tasmania’s overstretched public education system.

The paper highlights key issues while calling for action to ensure its proposed solutions lead to positive outcomes for all state school students in Tasmania.

Among its recommendations, the paper, calls for improved recruitment and support of new teachers, increases to in-class support and increased access to allied health services.

These improvements can only help to reduce bullying, increase parent engagement, promote attendance and student retention in the classroom and, overall, improve education and wellbeing outcomes.

TASSO are disappointed that no Lifting Learning solutions have been implemented and understand that teachers feel they have no other option than to take stop work action to have their voice heard. We support educators in taking this action.

By making this investment, our children can get the support and education they deserve ensuring no student falls through the cracks.

This is about investing for our future communities.
